FORMULATE DEMAND

People Want Appointment of Special Prosecutor.

CONFIDENCE IN JEROME LOST

New York Gossip—Ryan and Belmont Fall Out—Gov. Hughes' Peculiar Position—Lemuel Ely Quigg Premier Accusation—Chandler's Friends' Politics.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—If it be true that "when thieves fall out honest men get their dues" much good may come of the bickering between the chief culprits in the looting of New York's traction companies. It is now said that Ryan and Belmont have fallen foul of one another, because of certain disclosures brought forth by the Irvine inquiry—disclosures which form one long record of dishonesty, double-dealing and treachery on the part of the parties toward each other as well as toward the public.

With what bitterness all parties to this miserable sordid story must look back upon an alliance which has not only proved unprofitable and unsuccessful but has actually brought personal and financial disgrace upon the chief participants therein! And how sleepless must be the nights of men who hear a cry on every side that they shall be sent to prison, if laws can be found to punish them!

The public's distrust of District Attorney Jerome is so great that a demand has been formulated for presentation to Governor Hughes for the appointment of a special prosecutor. Jerome seems to stand in awe of the rich—and particularly of the rich who have in anywise contributed to his welfare. He cannot be relied upon to take needed action in such cases. His record proves that. He is either indifferent or incompetent or worse. He has never yet proceeded vigorously, promptly and faithfully in any case of colossal theft involving the public interest which he so fervently promised to guard.

The demand has gone forth that Governor Hughes should appoint William M. Ivins, special district attorney, and that criminal action should be begun at once against Thomas F. Ryan, Anthony N. Brady and August Belmont.

Under no circumstances should the public stand for a man of Jerome's character acting as the public prosecutor in such cases. He is a person of small ideas, and much bombast. Besides, he has been weighed in the balances and found wanting. It is particularly desirable at this moment that the people be represented in so important a prosecution by a man who has no debts or obligations to pay, who is absolutely fearless, and who is perfectly honest. For let it be known, there is a great deal more apt to come out of such a prosecution than the mere fact that "certain malefactors of great wealth" may "get time"; it has been hinted before, and the rumor grows and strengthens into an almost direct statement, that certain monies of the Ryan-Brady-Belmont crowd were used to aid the election of a powerful official in this state, who is now in a position to help them materially, if he will—and that official's name has been mentioned for the Presidency.

Governor Charles E. Hughes has always been a corporation lawyer, in the pay of corporations, and presumably, therefore, in sympathy with their methods. He was a partner of that same Paul D. Cravath, who is now the chief counsel for Mr. Ryan. On occasions Governor Hughes has even been a sort of apologist for corporation methods—or at least he has shown a tender sympathy for wrongdoers of great wealth who have been pilloried in the public press. Already he is on record as having said during his campaign, and in response to William R. Hearst's charges against traction and other big corporate frauds:

"Our business life has been paraded as though it consisted of organized robbery. Those in charge of great enterprises have been pilloried as plunderers and bandits. If an editor aspires to office he must justify that aspiration by always being faithful to the truth." And again at Rochester, "Wealthy men have been pilloried in cartoons; they have been subject to calumny and abuse. Those who have not responded promptly to the process of the courts have been made the special objects of contempt."

Altogether it is a curious situation, and many reputations will be made and many more unmade before the end comes. And in view of all the circumstances, known and unknown, is it small wonder that we of the crew of the good ship New York feel the need of a careful pilot to escape the Scylla of a Jerome or the Charybdis of a Hughes. Lemuel Ely Quigg could tell a lot if he would—but he won't! Quigg can go farther around Robin Hood's barn than any man living. He is the champion convolutor, as well as the premier accelerator, of America. Personally he is one of the lowest and most deliberate men that ever took a hand in political-financial affairs. The idea of him being employed for the purpose of accelerating public opinion on anything else seem ridiculous to those who know him in a casual way. He is the personification of lechery. Ten years ago he was a newspaper editor and the men around him could never understand how he held his job. Though he never seemed to take a deep interest in his work and seemingly had no idea of the general news of the day, it was peculiar that whenever any important topic arose he was always able to go right to the crux of the situation, both as a newspaperman and a politician.

While there can be no question of Mr. Quigg's shrewdness, he is by no means the marvelous "Creator of a new idea" that some paper called him a few days ago. He was simply smart enough to apply an old game that politicians resort to in every campaign, and to give a twist thereto to make it suit his own purpose.

An old Amen Corner politician said at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night:

"Give a man with any sort of a following, an educated brakeman, a learned hack driver, a talkative barber, a colored Demosthenes, and you have a good man to head an 'organization.' This 'organization' passes resolutions favoring the candidacy of some man or some party ticket, and there's another hundred thousand votes or so to rain-bow about. That's done in every campaign."

"Quigg learned this game when he was chairman of the Republican County Committee. He simply used the same

Hard Times in Kansas.
The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Odell, Earl Saaburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me."
